

Three Sisters... Three Swifties

Taylor Swift is a girlboss. Her music is catchy, inspiring and relatable, and her concerts are fun, interactive and have a great vibe. I love being a Swiftie because it makes me feel more connected to the music. Anyone can just listen to a song and enjoy it, but when you are listening to songs written by someone who means more to you than just the music, it's a totally different feeling. I love that Taylor is one of the most famous entertainers in the world, yet she comes across as down to earth and humble. She admits when she makes a mistake during her concert, laughs about her wardrobe malfunctions and hypes up her dancers. At the Eras Tour concert I attended, Taylor impressed me by standing up for her fans. Mid song, she noticed that one of the security guards was getting too close to some female fans who were dancing and having a good time. She called him out and made sure that they had a great concert experience. In one of Taylor's songs, You're on Your Own, Kid, she sings "so make the friendship bracelets". So now it's a thing at her concerts to make friendship bracelets and trade them with other Swifties. I saw someone who went all out and made over 400 bracelets to trade! I loved being able to trade the bracelets I made with other Swifties! If I had an extra ticket to a Taylor Swift concert, I would bring one of my best friends who loves screaming the lyrics to the songs just as loudly as I do! -love4fashion

...Ready For It? If you were to ask a random group of Americans who their favorite music artist was, I bet a high percentage of them would pick Taylor Swift. I love her for her catchy lyrics, fun tunes, and incredible performances. She expresses her feelings through song and makes so many people feel heard. She writes about her own personal experiences and also the fantasies she has created in her head. For years, Taylor Swift has been writing her own music which makes me credit her with integrity. She feels the need to own everything she produces, so after her first six albums were sold, she decided to re-record those albums just so she had the rights to her music. Taylor Swift's current tour has sold out stadiums of tens of thousands, leaving many feeling Enchanted, including myself. Her over three hour long concert may seem lengthy, but I was hooked for its entirety. Taylor Swift is not only an incredible female artist, an amazing marketer, and a smart business-woman, but she also appeals to a huge demographic. I would love to take my sisters to her concert because I know All Too Well how much they love and appreciate her music. Taylor Swift is an inspiration to me and so many others!

I love being a Swiftie because listening to Taylor's music makes me feel happy and Swifties are so sweet to one another. The things that I loved most about the Eras Tour were how all of the fans were so kind to each other, trading friendship bracelets, and how amazing and specific all of the little concert details were. All of Taylor's outfits and quick changes are so cool!! Her backup dancers are really talented and look like they are having the best time performing for the crowd. I love that Taylor's style of music is different from everyone else - it is a combination of country, pop and even a little hip hop! I think Taylor is an independent woman and extremely talented. If I could take one person to the Eras Tour, I would take my best friend who is also a huge Swiftie! - InAMinute
